

Antibiotic Resistance

Antibiotic resistance has become a public health threat. With this in mind, Spokane Regional Health District, along with the Washington State Department of Health, has developed materials that can be used to educate the public and medical personnel about the use of antibiotics.

These fact sheets can be used by health care providers to inform patients about viral infections that should not routinely be treated with antibiotics. These materials can be used when educating patients who are demanding antibiotics.

Included in this section:

- Bronchitis
- Ear Infections
- Runny Nose
- Sinus Infections
- Sore Throat
- Skin Infections (MRSA)